

The Boom.

To the Chronicle.

We are soon to have a railroad to the iron ore beds of this county and Dickson. We are soon to have a railroad that will give direct transportation South. We have fine timber, and tobacco; river transportation to the gulf, and to the great iron market, St. Louis. Ours is a wheat country, and our farmers grow wool, while our near neighbors grow cotton. We have railroads to bring us coal from mines only a few miles from the city and we have railroads to ship our manufactured articles North, West and East, with the new Southern road we can ship to all points of the compass. We will, beyond question, soon have iron furnaces in full blast, these no doubt will be built with foreign capital, this will attract other capital and in a little while we will have, cotton mills woolen mills, more flour mills, tobacco factories for manufacturing chewing and smoking tobacco, stone factories, tanneries, wooden factories and other factories. Clarksville is the healthiest point in the state, I might say in any state; no disease has ever prevailed here as an epidemic. The climate can't be surpassed and with this new railroad, Clarksville's facilities will be superior to those of Birmingham or Chattanooga and if only the proper effort is made to show to the world our great resources we will in less than two years, have a city of over forty thousand people.

Clarksville has had many drawbacks, among some of them may be mentioned an illiberal spirit, a want of enterprise upon the part of those who have composed our city government, I do not refer to the present board of Mayor and Aldermen more than to their illustrious predecessors who set examples and established precedents. For the sake of a few dollars, guards have been stationed at the terminus of every street leading to a turnpike or bridge, for the purpose of keeping people out unless they pay toll, such a thing belongs to an age that is past. In all enterprising cities it died long ago and is now an old fossil to which memory goes back only to be reminded of the want of forethought and public spirit which existed then.

A Northern gentleman passed over the lower bridge on Red river a few days since; he was surprised when asked for toll on such a bridge. In the conversation, which followed, he was informed that if he traveled a mile and a half further he would have to pay another toll. His astonishment was indeed great. He said: "Such a thing could not last a month in my country, I verily believe the people would pull the bridge down rather than submit to it. Your country can't prosper while such a disposition as this is shown."

This is a fact detailed as it occurred—that man went home with an unfavorable opinion of Clarksville and he lives in a Northern city built up by its manufactures almost alone. If Clarksville is to become a great city it must begin now, and it must display to the world that we are a generous, liberal, kind-hearted people; we must remove every straw that would indicate the blowing of an ill wind.

This article is not written for the purpose of inducing the city legislature to free the bridges for the sake of having those outside enjoy the privilege of going to town without paying for it; that is a mole-hill to a mountain compared to the beneficial effect it will have upon the city, as it removes one of those little evidences so blighting in its tendency, although to us who are used to it, it does not appear to be a serious matter. Calm reflections must make every one of fair judgment and discerning mind, see that it is a serious matter; one that should be removed without delay.

Clarke's Extract of Flax Cough Cure

It is a sure cure for Whooping Cough. It stops the whoop, and permits the child to catch its breath. It is entirely harmless. Good for any cough of childhood or old age. It heals the bronchi and lungs and stops the cough. For winter or Bronchial Cough this syrup is the best ever discovered. Only one size, large bottle. Price $1.00, at Owen & Moore's Drug Store.

Clarke's Flax Soap makes the Skin smooth, soft and white. Price 25 cents.

Mrs. Hayes Sunday Afternoon.

Mrs. Juliana Hayes, President of the Ladies Board of Missions, will lecture at the Methodist Church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Both ladies and gentlemen of all denominations are invited to attend.

Mrs. Hayes is not a missionary agent, but is traveling and presenting the cause in the light it merits to the public. She is a highly cultured, earnest Christian lady, an eloquent pleasing speaker, and all who attend will be highly entertained, and the ladies of the church bespeak for her such an audience as the merits of the lady and the cause she represents deserve, and that is a crowded house. Let all attend.

Clarksville Tobacco Market.

CLARKSVILLE, TENN., Dec. 4, 1889. An occasional lot of new tobacco appears on the breaks, and the prices obtained do not accord with those paid in the country for loose tobacco. It is apparently the policy of loose buyers to stimulate a large planting in 1890, with the view perhaps of buying at low prices a year hence, but in the meantime a good benefit is reaped by the horny-handed sons of toil who made the 1889 crop. Sales this week were about 400 hhds., and the market remains unchanged:

Common Lugs.....	75 to 1.50
Medium Lugs.....	1.75 to 2.25
Good Lugs.....	2.50 to 3.00
Common Leaf.....	3.50 to 4.00

PECULIARITIES OF PAINTERS.

Anecdotes of Men Who Became Famous by the Brush.

Turner, the great landscape painter, was as fond of money as he was of art, and did not hesitate to resort to a mean act to obtain it. Among other instances of extortion might be mentioned the one he practiced upon Lord de Tabley, the English nobleman, who was an amateur painter of more than ordinary ability. On one occasion he invited a large company to dinner, Turner being among the number. The host exhibited a landscape on canvass, not yet completed, and invited friendly criticism upon it. Not a few of those present volunteered remarks, but Turner took a brush and made a few slight changes, with scarcely any comment. A few days afterward the nobleman, much to his surprise, received a bill for a large sum from Turner for "Instruction in Painting." He was indignant, but preferred to submit to the extortion rather than offend the artist, and sent his check for the amount of the bill.

Protagoras, the Greek painter, was an impatient man. In painting a picture of a tired, panting dog, he met with satisfactory success, except that he failed in every attempt to imitate the foam that should have been seen on the dog's mouth. He was so much provoked over it that he seized the sponge with which he cleaned his brushes and threw it against the picture, with the intention of spoiling it. It happened to strike on the dog's mouth, and produced, to the astonishment and delight of the painter, the very effect he had labored so persistently to imitate.

The subjoined anecdote of Bouton, the French artist, illustrates how absorbed he was when he worked, as well as the good nature of King Louis Philippe. Bouton was busy one day when a man entered unannounced and stood behind him. He had his mouth full of paint brushes, did not glance up, but mumbled: "Look about if you like; don't mind me." The visitor did so, and then came back to his original position. Bouton felt annoyed, but repressed his impatience. "Well, how is everybody at home?" he asked. "Oh, nicely, thank you," was the reply. "The children are well, I suppose?" "Oh, perfectly." The visitor then began to criticize the picture; and when, after a half hour's conversation, the artist turned around, he beheld the King of France. Bouton blushed and stammered: "Sire, you are artist king enough to know that I would have lost my tint had I stopped to display the atelier to your majesty." "Yes," replied the king, "I like your reception of me so well that I mean to have that picture."

Paul Veronese, like many other painters, was given to eccentric moods and odd habits. On one occasion he accepted the hospitality of a family at their beautiful country villa. He assumed great liberties during his visit, claiming absolute possession of his room, allowing not even a servant to enter. He would not suffer a maid to make his bed, and the sweepings of his room were left every morning outside the door for her to remove. He slipped away without bidding the family good-by. On entering the room, the servant found the sheets of the bed missing, and at once reported that the painter must have stolen them. After careful search a roll was found in a corner, which proved to be a magnificent picture of "Alexander in the tent of Darius." It was painted on the missing sheets of the bed, and the artist had chosen this curious way of recompensing his hosts for their generous hospitality.

When Meissonier built his house at Poissy, a suburb of Paris, he had it torn down eight or ten times because, when completed, some detail displeased him. He built another house at Les Jardies, but forgot to put in a staircase. He took the mistake good naturedly, and placed a ladder against the outside wall. His house at Poissy was adorned with fountains, conservatories, upholstery, statues, but not a picture by the artist hung on its walls. A lady observing this want said to him: "I see beautiful things, M. Meissonier—beautiful gardens, beautiful rooms, books, rich hangings, etc., but I see none of your own pictures." "Ah, madame," answered he, "they are too dear to allow me to keep them."—Epoch.

A Motion to "Squash."

Col. M—, commonwealth's attorney for — county, had unbounded influence over the presiding justice of the county court under the old system. B—, a young lawyer, had been detained to defend a prisoner, and discovering what he conceived to be a fatal defect in the indictment, submitted a motion to squash. He was proceeding to sustain his point as best he could when the presiding justice, a fat old fellow, settled himself in his chair and fell asleep. The argument proceeded, and at its close "the squire" roused up, and rubbing his eyes, said, "Squash 'er."

Col. M— was on his feet in a moment, and inquired, with much asperity:

"Do I understand this court as sustaining the motion to quash my indictment?"

"Oh! No, kurnil," said the squire. "I squashes the motion to squash."—Harper's Magazine.

Well Governed.

The Chinese have a political saying which is worthy the reading even of American statesmen. It is as follows: When is the empire well governed, and affairs go as they should go? When swords are rusty and spades are bright; when prisons are empty and grain bins filled; when the law courts are lonely, and o'ergrown with grass; when doctors walk and bakers ride. It is then things go as they ought and the state is well ruled.—Youth's Companion.

Not Infallible.

Mrs. Phondyvis—Husband, dear, the doctor insists that if you let your beard grow you will live longer.

Mr. P.—I doubt it. At least that plan has never prolonged the life of the oyster.—Pittsburg Bulletin.
